Terrible Railroad Accident!!

LOCAL PREIGHT TRAIN THROWN IN THE RIVER! Conductor Carver Killed

Escape of Engineer & Firemen! A SPAN OF THE BRIDGE GONE! AN ENGINE AND TEN CARS BURIED IN THE RUINS ::

On Thursday morning one of the Cleveland & Toledo Railroad befel the Local Preight Train bound eastward, at about 9 o'clock. As the train was moving slowly cross the bridge the engine was thrown of the track upon the timbers just east of the center pier and the whole eastern span gave way, throwing the engine, ten cars and half Conductor CARYER has not been found at the time we write this report, but it is almost certain that he was killed and buried the current week must be handed in as early in the wreck. The engineer and fireman saved themselves by jumping into the river near the east bank. As the ice broke letting severe bruises and made their way to the house of Mr. Ginn, out of the terrible storm, the o'her side. Engineer Brannon had several ribs broken and was otherwise severely injured, and the Fireman, whose name

One car, loaded with dressed hogs, was thrown forty or fifty feet up the river many sciences; the translation into the and lies partly out of the water. The rest are is quite an addition to the blooded stock of the bridge and the lumber, boxes and barrels; which made up the freight that no form of shape of car is distinguishable. The cause of the accident is not known The most probable theory is that the tin roof of the bridge was blown up and across the track by the terrible storm which came with ice and snow, threw the engine off upon the timbers which were not strong nough to sustain the shock. The tin roof now lies on a part of the track over which the train passed. The Engine appears to have been drawn back after it had reached the east pier, falling on the North side, and sinking nearly out of sight. This gave the Engineer and Fireman time to jump from the train, while the Conductor, who was also on the Engine seems to have been carried down with it. We hope that these losses will convince the Company of the economy to a town in New England with his blide of building a substantial stone bridge across and lesing her somewhere in the streets; o the river. The expense would be comparatively light, as materials of the best kind are close at hand, and the dangers of travel would be lessened a hundred fold.
